Summer Reading 2017 High School

Written evaluations for summer reading have changed.
Changes are italicized for your convenience.
Please read this document carefully.

(Seniors who are participating in Dual Enrollment only need to complete the Biblical Reading.)

Realizing that reading and writing are fundamental skills needed by every student and are essential to succeed in a very competitive world, the academic team at Trinity strives to deliver the best instruction in these areas that we can provide. With God's blessing and guidance, we have been able to build a solid curriculum that meets these goals. As part of that curriculum, each Trinity student entering grades 6-12 will complete summer reading that includes reading and interpreting literature. The reading list for this project includes one book from the Bible and one literary selection. Please pay careful attention to the "Required and Selected Literary Reading" section below because it clearly describes what is expected.

Biblical Reading:

After reading the assigned book of the Bible, each student will create a devotional based on a passage from that book. Students should remember to include the scriptures from which they are taking their lessons and be very thorough. They must make sure that the lessons drawn from the scriptures are very clear to the reader and can be very easily taught to students in class. The devotional should take no less than 5-10 minutes to present and will include a visual aid (i.e., handout, poster, PowerPoint, etc. No word searches). Students will share their devotionals in Bible class on an assigned date. This assignment will count as a test grade.

Required and Selected Literary Reading:

Over the summer the students will NOT have to complete a writing assignment. However, students must have read the assigned works thoroughly to participate in class discussions in August. At the beginning of school, the English teachers will instruct students on the preparation of the literary analysis. Upon completion of the literary analysis, the student will earn a test grade.
